Detroit Area Financial Planners Publish Book, 'No-Load Divorce,' on Minimizing Emotional and Financial Burdens of Divorce Process

Bloomfield, MI -- May 14, 2004 /Send2Press Newswire/ -- Two financial planners, Bill Kumm and Steve Case, co-founders and senior partners of Financial Independence, Inc., a Detroit area firm, have published a book detailing the processes and methods of a new method of divorce: the No-Load Divorce(TM). The "No-Load Divorce" process from FI Publishing helps individuals end their marriage with their dignity and financial stability intact.

No strangers to divorce, Mr. Kumm and Mr. Case specialize in helping divorcing couples complete a fair and respectful divorce.

"Divorce is a difficult and traumatic event for any person to go through," says co-author Bill Kumm, "and the emotional and financial difficulties that will occur in any divorce are exacerbated by the seemingly inevitable legal battles ahead. Large legal fees and a seeming lack of control over the divorce process produce feelings of bitterness and unnecessary emotional trauma for all involved."

The 10-step processes detailed in "No-Load Divorce" allow individuals to take control of their divorce, guiding them through every phase. It helps them navigate difficult issues, such as child custody and asset division, while detailing non-contentious methods that minimize as much as possible the resultant financial and emotional trauma. Every step of the process is guided by the opinions and insights of experts, including lawyers, financial planners, mediators, counselors, clergy, and children of divorced families.
