“Discovering what other bloggers are talking about is an essential part of being a successful blogger,” Says Eric Griffin, CEO of Bingo Bango Software, Inc. “With the integration of Topix Search and Blog Search in Elicit; bloggers can search other blogs while they are writing for their blog.”

Topix Search and Blog Search are integrated as an Elicit “docklet.” The Topix Blog Search docklet is a floating dockable window whose content can be dragged and dropped into Elicit’s blog entry editor. The blogger never has to leave Elicit or open a browser window to access Topix search results.

The Topix Blog Search docklet joins the, Yahoo, Technorati and Google Blog Search docklets already within Elicit to provide an unprecedented level of access, in one blog client, to the pulse of the blogosphere.

Elicit can be downloaded for a 30 day trial and purchased for $59 from their web site at www.bingobangosoftware.com

About Elicit

Elicit, released October 3, 2005, is a desktop blogging client that connects to WordPress, Blogharbor, Typepad, Squarespace, Blogger, Livejournal and MovableType blog management systems. Elicit is the first blog client to allow bloggers to manage and publish automatically, to dozens of blogs, with a calendar without having to push a "publish" button. Elicit is the first blog client to integrate Web and RSS Services from Amazon, Chitika, Google, MSN, Flickr, Furl, Del.icio.us and Yahoo in one place, for the purpose of increasing blogger productivity.
