DevTeam: LiveRepair.com Expands into Outsourced Software Development

Having gained more than 6 years of in-house software development experience, LiveRepair.com now offers outsourced software development and Web design services commercially

THORNWOOD, NY (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) — LiveRepair.com (www.liverepair.com), a leading provider of remote support solutions, officially announced a new direction in the company's growth. LiveRepair.com's software development department that was previously more focused on creating software and Web solutions for internal use and integration/customization projects now forms a new company division named DevTeam (devteam.liverepair.com). It will focus on supplying outsourced software development, as well as Web site design and Web development services for companies worldwide.

"We have always employed the best professionals in software and Web development," says Larry Sheremetyev, Director of Business Development, Marketing and Sales at LiveRepair.com. "They have developed our TekOffice helpdesk management solution and many outstanding projects for our affiliate and reseller partners. We decided that it's time to let other businesses benefit from their competence and experience."

DevTeam combines advanced software engineering skills with superior project management to provide high-quality development services for projects of any level of complexity. DevTeam can contribute on any stage of the process: help a company re-engineer existing systems or migrate to latest platforms, create a new component for a working system, or develop corporate IT infrastructure from point zero. Whether a company needs a simple Web site or an extensive Web portal, a comprehensive database with advanced search capabilities or an entire CRM system, DevTeam will help it analyze the requirements, compare alternatives solutions, and build the optimal, most efficient and cost-effective system using the latest technologies available to date. Advanced technologies, such as multi-tier applications, object-oriented programming (OOP), XML, .NET and .NET 2 have been used extensively in recent projects.

The DevTeam staff has extensive experience in the development of Internet applications, Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) and Customer Relations Management (CRM) solutions, AI (Artificial Intelligence) expert systems, and Decision Support Systems (DSS). All DevTeam employees have advanced degrees in Computer Science and related areas of knowledge. All of them earned industry-recognizable certification levels, such as Microsoft Certified Professional (MCP), Microsoft Certified Application Developer (MCAD), Microsoft Certified Solution Developer (MCSD) for Microsoft .NET, as well as possess numerous Brainbench certifications.

"We may charge slightly more than some companies located in low cost locations," adds Larry Sheremetyev. "You will agree that qualities such as performance, quality, security, timely delivery, and being within the budget are worth a premium. However, we guarantee that the total cost of the project is lower than with any other software development company."

Deep understanding of business practices and solid experience in systems development help DevTeam build comprehensive solutions quickly and efficiently, because every development project is based on its core competencies. The best industry practices in project management and quality assurance allow DevTeam to complete every project on the schedule and within the budget specified in the initial contract. DevTeam is proud of every line of code, as solutions delivered to customers provide them with top-notch performance, reliability, and security.
