Saturdays mornings at about 10:30 a.m., world-renowned faery-hunters, Frances Griffith and Elsie Wright, are meeting with children from all over Orange County to seek and find these “faeries and other magical creatures.”

“It’s a show, it’s a hike, and it’s creative dramatic play,” explains A Faery Hunt! O.C. producer, Cynthia Milenkovich. “More importantly, it’s a family thing for the faery prince and princess in all of us.”

A Faery Hunt! O.C. is the Orange County Company of the popular A Faery Hunt! show that has run for over a year in Los Angeles under the direction of writer/producer Debbie Rothstein. The O.C. company has been up and running since their successful May 6 preview, to the delight of parents and children.

“Children as young as two and as old as...someone twice my age...will love this show,” claims Ms. Milenkovich. The show relies heavily on parent endorsement and word-of-mouth and “...parents are already referring friends and neighbors to us after they have attended, and we thank them.”

In addition to the public shows scheduled for Saturday mornings, the entire show, as well as various characters, is available for private parties, school-based performances, personal appearances and fund raising-activities. Check out www.afaeryhunt.com to see information on both Los Angeles and Orange County locations.

Reservations for the Saturday morning show are recommended by calling (714) 557-1507. Children must be accompanied by children and there is a $10-per-person suggested contribution. The show runs approximately 45 minutes. Parents should ensure that their children are dressed for the weather, as coastal mornings can be chilly. Faery wear is encouraged.
