

New Company Uses Internet to Connect Operators With Maintenance Facilities

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. – Sept. 13 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – Jet Repair Anywhere has announced plans to launch its new Internet based company during the upcoming 59th NBAA Convention in Orlando, FL., October 17-19, 2006.

“Jet Repair Anywhere has revolutionized the way in which aircraft maintenance services are accessed,” said Cheryl Janke, Jet Repair Anywhere’s CEO, adding, “Aircraft operators and owners looking to have their aircraft serviced can now be connected to maintenance facilities worldwide. Jet Repair Anywhere’s new service offers relief to Part 145 Repair Stations from the abysmal mound of paperwork required by most Part 135 and Part 91 operators. At any time subscribers have online access to vendor information which has been verified and archived on Jet Repair Anywhere’s web server.”

“A comprehensive database of maintenance facilities has already been established, and as an introduction to this service, Jet Repair Anywhere will be offering aircraft owners and operator’s complimentary access to this data, until the end of this year,” said Robert Salvo, President and Director of Marketing.

“Providing Internet access to critical data, enables aircraft owner/operators to expedite the search for qualified maintenance facilities, thus minimizing delays for owners and passengers when maintenance issues occur on the road,” explained Salvo. “It is of paramount importance for repair stations to have their facility listed on our consortium, providing worldwide exposure to new clients. The benefit to aircraft owners/operators will be self evident the first time they break down in a remote location at 0200 hours, without a clue of who to call.”

Both aircraft operators and maintenance facilities can find out more about Jet Repair Anywhere’s service, including subscription rates, at: www.jetrepairanywhere.com.
