The site also complements the look of its commercial collateral, bringing more consistency to all its promotional materials.

“The need for investigative and protective services support is greater than ever before,” says Julien Patterson, OMNIPLEX’s Founder and CEO. “We provide unparalleled training and very competitive compensation. Many of our most successful recruits are former law enforcement and military personnel looking for a new, rewarding, and flexible career opportunity. We hear over and over from our staff and from our new hires that for those who enjoy this field and who are looking to energize their career and move up, that OMNIPLEX is the place to be," he said.

David Nemzoff, manager of OMNIPLEX's publication services stated, "We feel this new look is more representative of how we view the company and the market position we have established for ourselves. More importantly, we wanted to make it easier for the viewer to get the information they are looking for." Fewer clicks for the user, faster times for browser load and easier processes for content management are all part of the rationale for the site.

The site maintains most of its navigational structure, but places elements for better graphical impact and user preferences. Additionally, the site now incorporates a new drop-down menu system from the upper navigation bar for fewer clicks and faster, more direct access to security services or other areas of interest.
