With the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) reporting on August 30, 2007, that flight delays were up 19 percent from last summer, purchasing travel insurance is more important than ever. Over 15 million people will take to the skies during the upcoming holiday season hoping for smooth arrivals and departures to their destinations. Unfortunately many will experience flight delays which can cause them to lose time and money on their vacation and create additional stress as they struggle to make emergency hotel accommodations and book new flights to catch up with their trip.

“By purchasing travel insurance from CSA when booking flights, cruises and hotel accommodations on Cheapoair.com, travelers can immediately protect themselves,” said Les Maine, CEO CSA Travel Protection
