Arclinea Boston received its 2007 awards for two distinct projects: an expansive kitchen/dining area in a single-family residence in Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, and for three unique kitchens designed for a multi-unit condominium development in Boston's historic North End.

In selecting the North End kitchens, judges praised their "space defining, unique, and sleek design."

The Chestnut Hill kitchen, featuring a meticulously designed, fully functional working kitchen and adjacent casual and formal dining areas, was called “a duplicity of excitement which displays controlled refinement and an exceptional use of light.”

“Every Arclinea kitchen is fully customized to accommodate gourmet level cooking in a setting that complements the overall architecture of the home and facilitates the lifestyle of its users,” says Arclinea Boston owner Philip Guarino. “These awards are a great testament to the flexibility of Arclinea’s design principles.”
