Anne shares the company’s enthusiasm and is equally excited to be on board. She states, “I am pleased to join Visual Evidence at this time because electronic discovery is the fastest growing and most evolving area of the law.”

She looks forward to working with the clients at Visual Evidence to help them to navigate the recent amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

“These recent amendments provide demanding challenges to corporations and law firms today," Anne says. "I am confident that my legal and technical experience will allow me to provide solutions and guidance to our client throughout their litigation process."

About Anne S. Peterson, Esq.

Anne received her J.D. from Fordham Law School and is currently a Supervising Attorney and Adjunct Professor at Duquesne University School of Law in the Clinical Legal Education department. She developed and copyrighted Duquesne Law School's new electronic discovery course which is the first in the country to use simulation software, provided by Visual Evidence, within a traditional law school curriculum.

Anne's legal experience includes positions as in-house and outside counsel for a major insurance company. She began her legal career with a top 10 New Jersey law firm in the litigation department. Prior to law school, Anne was employed by IBM as a Marketing Representative and Systems Engineer.

About Visual Evidence / E-Discovery LLC

Visual Evidence / E-Discovery LLC is an owner operated entity that was created in response to client needs regarding the emergence of electronic discovery. Their facility houses the Forensic Center, Imaging Center, the application development staff, trial services department, sales and management. The majority of Visual Evidence's clients are large law firms and the corporate clients that they service. While the large firms and corporate clients make up a significant portion of the business base, the client base extends to more than 3,000 firms and individual litigators in locations across the nation.

Along with electronic discovery consulting and forensic services, VE offers unique and proprietary solutions for the legal industry such as VeHARVEST, a tool that allows for data harvesting at the client site; VeDATA MAP, a service that creates a network enterprise diagram for corporations; VeHOLD, an automated litigation hold application; and VeREVIEW, a web-enabled review tool.
