

Fleettracking.com Places Businesses in the Driver's Seat

VALENCIA, Calif., June 7, 2011 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – LiveView GPS, Inc. announced this week the launch of its new fleet tracking service – Fleettracking.com – that focuses on business to business (B2B) vehicle tracking. Fleettracking provides hardwired GPS vehicle trackers and portable battery-powered GPS tracking devices to businesses, nationwide. Its devices are compatible with DROIDs and iPhones; the service is not just web-based.

“Any business that wants to effectively manage and monitor employees and its vehicles will benefit from this fleet tracking service,” says George Karonis, president of LiveView GPS. “In addition, we offer back-end development for customers who need to integrate this service into their system.”

Six reasons to use a GPS fleet tracking system include: reduced fuel costs; improved customer service; reduced payroll costs; elimination of moonlighting/side jobs; increased employee accountability; and increased driver safety.

“While there are many vehicle tracking devices out there,” says Karonis, “few offer the easy-to-use features that we do.”

The web user interface system is easy to use and “how to” videos guide the user every step of the way. Additionally, live support is always available.

The control panel is the hub of the action and allows easy access to all features and functions of this GPS user tracking system.

Features include: a map overview which is updated every five to 10 seconds; map control; a devices tab that enables the user to customize their map view; a report tab that lets the user obtain reports online or via email; an alert system; a search tab to help users easily find locations; dispatch and directions; an address editor; live support; and historical playback which is available for the previous 90 days.
