

Pamela D. Wilson (The Care Navigator) Joins Baby-Boomers Social Networking Site, ActiveEmptyNesters.com

ENGLEWOOD, Colo., July 12, 2011 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – ActiveEmptyNesters.com, the free social networking site aimed at helping baby boomers maintain an active lifestyle, is proud to announce that Pamela D. Wilson, host of the weekly radio show The Caring Generation, will be joining us as an ongoing contributor.

Ms. Wilson (MS, BS/BA, CG, CSA, Certified Senior Advisor) is a specialist in working with both individuals and families, helping them navigate the many healthcare and other issues an aging baby boomer generation, and their families, can face. Ms. Wilson is a court appointed guardian and host of the weekly talk show The Caring Generation® (630 KHOW-AM) “embracing life’s transitions with dignity, clarity and stability.” She coordinates services and provides education for listeners of The Caring Generation and others in the community who are overwhelmed by caregiving and needing care.

“According to the U.S. Health and Retirement Study, there are over 10 million people over 50 years of age that are Caregivers in the U.S.,” said Ron Mercier, creator of Active Empty Nesters. “Caring for a spouse or aging parents take away one’s social connections because of the need to stay with at home. ActiveEmptyNesters.com will provide a place for caregivers to socialize with friends and be involved in discussions on topics that are important to their situation.”

Ms. Wilson will be contributing guest blogs on ActiveEmptyNesters.com, as well as moderating the website’s interest group for Caregivers, and giving advice on how to approach aging by embracing life’s transition with dignity, clarity and stability.

“I am excited to join with ActiveEmptyNesters.com to provide education on the subject of aging, caregiving and everything in between. This is an area of great concern and stress for individuals facing these issues who continually tell me they desire a single source of reliable information,” said Pamela Wilson.

The Active Empty Nesters website provides a dynamic social gathering place allowing members to meet others with similar interests and provides the tools to easily interact with other users and friends. Membership to the site is completely free. Once registered, members can begin setting up their personal profile, inviting friends to events, and communicating with old and new friends alike through the site’s built in social-networking features.
