“Addressing employee financial wellness is a powerful tool in engagement. Creating engaged, high-performance cultures is a competitive edge. Savvy employers are doing both,” said Sheryl Simmons, CEO.

Simmons’ HRSouthwest session, entitled “Creating High-Performance Cultures – Connect Your People Strategy to Your Business Strategy” is scheduled for Tuesday, October 6, 2020.

Her EMERGE panel session, entitled “Employer Perspective: Addressing Health and Wealth in the Workplace” is scheduled for Wednesday, June 24, 2020.

“If you want your customers to love your brand, you must inspire your people to love your business,” said Simmons. “Culture is everything. The way companies are responding to their employees today will determine how their employees respond to them in the future. Employees are looking to us for leadership that meets them where they live. That means engaging in the absolute connection between physical, mental, and financial health – the whole health of our workforce.”
