

7-Data Android Recovery Software Released to Answer Android File Recovery Needs

HONG KONG, Aug. 20, 2013 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – SharpNight have just released a beta version of their Android data recovery software, 7-Data Android Recovery, for users to recover files from Android phones, tablets, and SD card in Android devices.

Android is popular as a phone and tablet operating system. According to IDC, worldwide in the fourth quarter of 2012, Android cell phones represented over 70 percent of the smartphone shipments at 159.7 million units. The trend continued with tablets for the same period with Android powered tablets grabbing over 42 percent of total tablets shipped.

Kevin Zhou of Sharpnight Co. Ltd. had this to say about entering the Android market: “We are happy to announce the first beta of our Android recovery software as we figured out it’s much easier to do the Android recovery on a desktop computer rather than on an Android device. Also you can perform a do-it-yourself recovery without giving away your privacy.”

Most people have experienced the loss of photos, music, videos or e-mails due to accidental deletion or memory failures in their Android device. While this used to be a detrimental problem that had no real solution, SharpNight has stepped forward with software to combat this problem.

Using 7-Data Android Recovery is similar to other SharpNight software. First connect your Android device to your computer, then in the 7-Data Android Recovery Software, scan and preview files. Once you preview the files that are found recovery is as simple as picking the files and clicking the save button then picking a place on your computer to save the files.
