On Tuesday, September 15, Reichhardt will join the panel session “Underwriting & QA: How to Make QC a Profit Center” from 3 – 3:50 p.m. ET.

The panel will be moderated by Steve Spies, a consultant with SWS Risk Advisory LLC, and Jason Emory, Senior Vice President of Quality Control at PrimeLending will join Sharon as a panelist. The session will feature a discussion on how lenders mitigate the significant revenue and personnel resources devoted to QC by leveraging enhancements in technology, real-time data validation and outsourcing strategies.

“The MBA has put together a remarkable group of industry veterans for this panel, and I am honored to participate,” said Reichhardt. “The COVID pandemic has placed a greater spotlight on new ways in which lenders can alleviate costs without sacrificing quality and I look forward to exploring those options on this panel.”

In addition to Reichhardt’s panel, ARMCO is also serving as the sole presenting sponsor for this year’s virtual event.

“The MBA’s RMQA Forum has always been the industry’s premier event for mortgage quality control and risk management professionals, but the current economic uncertainty lends extra weight to the purpose of this year’s event,” said ARMCO CEO Trevor Gauthier. “In the spirit of facilitating the exchange of ideas and best practices for maintaining loan quality, ensuring compliance and mitigating risk, ARMCO is proud to be this year’s presenting sponsor for RMQA, and we look forward to yet another first-rate MBA event.”
