"My goal with Buzzworthy is to provide incisive analysis on developing industry regulations and trends in a condensed format that even the busiest lender can fit into his or her day," said Fulmer, who serves as chief strategy and industry relations officer for FormFree. "In just 3 to 5 minutes per episode, Buzzworthy will break down key industry developments, explain why they matter to lenders, and leave listeners better equipped to take any necessary action."

A nationally recognized strategist, thought leader, speaker and author specializing in data integrity, fraud and regulatory compliance in mortgage loan originations, Fulmer has been a mortgage industry mainstay for more than 17 years.

Before joining FormFree, Fulmer was vice president of industry relations and strategy for First American Mortgage Solutions following its 2014 acquisition of mortgage fraud solutions provider Interthinx, a groundbreaking data and analytics innovator she joined in 2005. While at Interthinx, Fulmer hosted the “Direct from D.C.” podcast offering information and insights on pressing issues surrounding regulatory reform, the future of the government-sponsored enterprises (GSEs), qualified residential mortgages (QRMs) and the latest mortgage fraud trends.

Fulmer built her grassroots mortgage fraud expertise in metro Atlanta in her roles as DeKalb County district attorney and in the county’s tax assessor’s office, where she helped develop metrics to identify mortgage fraud in property transactions.
