

Daniel P. Douglas Cold War Sci-Fi Thriller Short Script 'Glimpse' Advances in 2016 Page International Screenwriting Awards

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., July 20, 2016 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – New Mexico-based writer Daniel P. Douglas announces his science fiction Cold War thriller short script, "Glimpse," has advanced to the quarterfinals of the 2016 Page International Screenwriting Awards. The awards competition was established in 2003 by an alliance of Hollywood producers, agents, and development executives.

In "Glimpse," a small group of agents who will become known as the "Men in Black" deploy in response to an event that provides a harrowing glimpse into humanity's apocalyptic future.

"Glimpse" revolves around an actual mass UFO sighting that occurred over the course of several days in the Farmington, New Mexico area (Four Corners region) in March 1950. A very spectacular event, yet not many people are even aware of it.

Douglas has adapted "Glimpse" into a short story with plans to expand it into a novella. The short story, also entitled "Glimpse" (ISBN: 978-0997329223),
