

Denver's Newest and Largest Floatation Center Has Just Opened Its Doors

DENVER, Colo., July 31, 2014 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – Astral Float Spa in Parker Colorado has just opened a new float center boasting 4 isolation tanks for sensory deprivation therapy making it the largest center in Colorado.

Floatation has been on the rise most notably by the advocacy of actor/comedian Joe Rogan who regularly speaks about it in interviews, on his radio show, and podcasts.

Astral Float Spa's owner Steven Skalkowski had this to say, "I am very excited to be able to offer floatation therapy for those who seek it. Floating is something that everyone can benefit from, not just for the body but for the mind and soul. Even professional sports is starting to take a closer look at floatation therapy as a means of having athletes perform at their peak. Floating not only aides in the recuperation of the body but offers better mental focus and clarity, the Dallas Cowboys and Philadelphia Eagles are currently using isolation tanks."

Skalkowski adds, "Recent studies have shown benefits for people suffering from Fibromyalgia and veterans coming home from combat with PTSD. Being prior military myself I look forward to helping as many veterans as I can and will offer the first session free for any vet diagnosed with PTSD. More and more people are looking for a way to unplug from this sensory overloaded society, floatation gives people that disconnect and the results are profound."

About Astral Float Spa:

Based in Parker Colorado offering floatation and sensory deprivation, using isolation tanks filled with 10 inches of water and 850 pounds of Epsom salt effectively making a person buoyant. The water is heated to skin temperature so the water is not felt and the tanks provide a noiseless and lightless environment. It is like relaxing in outer space.
