Red Nose Day is a fundraising campaign run by the non-profit organization Comic Relief Inc., a registered U.S. 501(c)(3) public charity. In 2015, Red Nose Day officially launched in the U.S. with a mission to bring people together to have fun, raise money, create awareness and help change the lives of children living in poverty. Globally, the event has raised over $1 billion since its launch in the U.K. in 1988.

“We want to continually give back to our community and those in need, and celebrating Red Nose Day is a very fun and novel way to do it while helping impoverished children,” stated Dominic Iannitti, president and CEO of DocMagic. “Our employees were excited to participate and had a blast doing it. We even had some of our staff at a mortgage banking conference in New York wearing red noses in our booth on the trade show floor, helping spread the word.”

Pictures of DocMagic employees supporting Red Nose Day can be found on the company’s Facebook page and a video can be found on YouTube.

The official event was televised by NBC on Thursday, May 24 at 7 p.m. PDT. A number of different celebrities and comedians showed to support Red Nose Day, which included Julia Roberts, Jack Black, Jennifer Garner, Kelly Clarkson, Ben Stiller, Sarah Silverman and Marlon Wayans, to name a few.

DocMagic also participates in other charitable events and community service activities throughout the year. The company has delivered thousands of its ‘Sergeant Doc’ themed bunnies to the children of military service members. Plans are currently underway for additional giveaways to various charities and causes this summer.
