“I’ve done a lot of presentations and speaking engagements throughout the greater Walnut Creek and Bay Areas, and it never ceases to amaze me how much people don’t know or understand about future planning,” says Absolute Trust Counsel founding attorney Kirsten Howe. “Having the opportunity to get together with so many of the other great business leaders in our community and being able to break these types of topics down into thought-provoking, approachable, and easy to consume content seemed like the right next steps to take to start debunking so many myths and misconceptions about wealth and estate planning.”

“Educating at every step.” Absolute Trust Talk is not your run of the mill general counsel show filled with legal jargon that doesn’t resonate. Through her 20+ years of practice, Absolute Trust Counsel founding attorney Kirsten Howe found herself working with clients who were confused and overwhelmed by the complexity of estate planning and saw a need to help clients with education and specific client-centered estate planning services.

Now Kirsten is taking her expertise and experience to a new level; she is on a mission to bring a thought-provoking and approachable, friendly voice not only to estate planning, but to a wide variety of business and financial wellness topics. Through a series of podcasts, Kirsten will connect with like-minded business professionals and work to coach and encourage listeners to make educated and informed planning decisions. Preparing for the future doesn’t have to be stressful or hard, but it does have to be smart.

Each Absolute Trust Talk episode will run about 30 minutes long, and the show will run bimonthly after our initial seven-episode launch.
