Schwartz will draw on insights from more than 30 years in housing to examine how mortgage bankers can embrace digital transformation, develop an understanding of housing finance policy and share knowledge with one another to better position themselves for success in a market characterized by stiff competition and compressed margins.

"I'm honored to have this opportunity to address leaders, peers and colleagues who are all motivated to influence the next phase of our dramatically evolving housing finance industry,” said Schwartz. “I hope to give the audience at NEXT actionable steps and strategic direction to keep them ahead of what’s to come.”
