“We are thrilled to welcome Idaho as the third state this year to fully embrace e-recording,” said Simplifile President Paul Clifford. “More than 80 percent of the U.S. population is covered by the Simplifile e-recording network as jurisdictions of all sizes embrace the efficiency and cost-savings e-recording provides. We hope jurisdictions currently contemplating e-recording will be inspired by Idaho’s commitment to improving document recording services through technology.”

In 2007, Washington County became the first jurisdiction in Idaho to adopt Simplifile’s e-recording service. With the addition of Nez Perce County in January and Shoshone County this past week, all 44 Idaho counties now e-record with Simplifile.

Recording offices throughout Idaho can now leverage Simplifile's e-recording platform to electronically receive, stamp, record and return documents within minutes, while settlement agents can submit recording fees and other recording-related expenses directly through system.

Simplifile is the largest e-recording network in the U.S., with more than 1,900 jurisdictions nationwide e-recording on the platform. In addition to Idaho, 10 other states offer statewide e-recording through Simplifile, including Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Hawaii, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada and Oregon.
