

Interpreters Unlimited, Inc. Doubles Revenue through Translation and Medical Transportation Company Acquisition

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Dec. 20, 2013 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – Interpreters Unlimited, Inc. announced this week that it has recently acquired Albors & Alnet, a language and medical transportation company. And, the Bank of Southern California was instrumental in providing the financing for the acquisition.

As a result of this acquisition, Interpreters Unlimited has doubled its number of employees; can now offer medical transportation services; has a presence on the east coast; has enhanced its presence in the workers' compensation industry; has doubled company revenue; and is able to create more jobs in response to a growing language and interpreter industry.

"In addition to organic growth, this recent acquisition is the result of an aggressive in-house acquisition growth strategy," Shamus Sayed, vice president, sales and marketing for Interpreters Unlimited, says. "The service offerings of Albors & Alnet will enhance and complement our current language and interpretation offerings. We truly offer seamless services in a one-stop-shopping environment."

And, the organic growth is impressive. Interpreters Unlimited is currently experiencing 15 percent organic growth year-over-year. There are no signs that this growth is slowing down.

The market drivers for language company growth are clear. Among them are: more global presence for businesses; exponential growth in the nation's immigrant population; federal and state requirements for translation interpretation has tripled; legislation mandates insurance and medical providers to offer interpretation and translation services; and the minority population in the U.S. is 35 percent.

In fact, in 2011, INC. Magazine listed three language companies among the fastest-growing private companies.

Rene Albors, CEO of Albors & Alnet says that, "After 25 years in the workers' compensation industry, I'm proud that our mission to be a truly worldwide organization will continue under this new leadership."
