As early as 2015, Phil Ydens, Adobe's VP of Engineering for document cloud, estimated there may be up to 2.5 trillion PDF documents all over the world. And this number is rising every year since PDF has been widely used by businesses, the government, schools, and individuals.

A survey from Abbyy showed more than 50% of those surveyed said they regularly had to perform at least one of the three operations. They need to convert, edit or do page management. However, many PDF tools separate the PDF reader from the editor, which invisibly complicates daily work.
