The TatumTek plant will use highly advanced fabrication and assembly technologies to build and assemble large modular components for use in residential and commercial construction projects such as single-family homes, condominiums, townhomes, hotels and other commercial structures. The construction on the plant, which will be located on Highway 180 just west of the Lamesa city limits, is expected to begin in the second quarter of 2020.

“Here, in close proximity to the heart of the Permian Basin,” explains Ron Smith, “the demand for new affordable residential housing will keep the TatumTek plant busy for a very long time. This land acquisition will help to expedite the plant construction which in turn will bring much needed residential development to Lamesa and the surrounding region. Our investors are not only investing in this one project, they are investing in ways to help diversify the economic future for Lamesa.”
