The official National Entrepreneurship Week website, www.entrepreneurshipweek.com, houses details on each of the week's daily events and offers. In addition, the site features free articles and downloadable resources on topics like business technology, branding and best practices – all designed to help eager entrepreneurs launch a business and to enable established small businesses to grow and thrive.

“National Entrepreneurship Week is about celebrating existing entrepreneurs and the positive impact they have on our economy, while showing aspiring entrepreneurs that they can make their dream a reality,” said Cindy Bates, vice president of small-to-mid-sized business at Microsoft. “Entrepreneurs who are bringing knowledge and support to help make this week a success will play a vital role during this initiative.”
