A renowned technologist and expert on loan originator (LO) compensation and productivity, Brewer was recognized for transforming the way mortgage lenders keep pace in a tight market. LBA Ware's CompenSafe™, the only mortgage-specific incentive compensation platform, is the result of Brewer's expertise as a software developer, deep understanding of mortgage compensation and penchant for creating order out of complex datasets.

To date, CompenSafe has calculated more than $2 billion in LO compensation and has helped lenders of all stripes better manage their compensation plans and gain insight into performance.

“Helping lenders see their data in new ways and identify opportunities to motivate performance has been the focus of my career,” said Brewer. “I’m deeply honored to accept this award on behalf of the entire LBA Ware team and look forward to continued opportunities to help lenders transform their productivity.”

Now in its 18th year, the MBA’s Tech All-Star program recognizes outstanding leaders for their contributions to mortgage lending through technology. Brewer was one of only four individuals selected to receive the award this year. The other three 2019 Tech All-Star award recipients named were Paul Akinmade, chief marketing officer at CMG Financial; Kara Lamphere, chief operating officer at Mid America Mortgage; and Laurie Pyle, chief operating officer at Factom.
