Stevens has been in the mortgage industry since 2009 and has held board positions with NAMB since 2012. He has also been involved in the Utah County Planning Commission, and is actively involved in numerous state and local community efforts.

As president, Stevens is spearheading NAMB's overall strategies to grow the organization's reach by expanding its membership and enhancing the opportunities it makes available to members, homeowners and the mortgage industry's community of individual loan originators and small to midsize businesses.

"The majority of mortgages in the U.S. are originated by small to midsize businesses, yet most of the industry isn't aware of how much collective power we have when we come together as a group," said Stevens. "My main priorities this year are to raise awareness of NAMB and NAMB's efforts, to grow our membership, and to leverage our power to make even more positive changes for the brokers, bankers and businesses we represent, as well as for all American homeowners, loan originators and small to midsize mortgage companies."

Stevens' mission this year is to "educate, advocate and empower." As part of this mission, he has developed strategies to expand NAMB's education programs and advocacy efforts, further strengthen its relationships with state "-AMB" associations, and expand awareness of the diversity of its target member base, which includes mortgage brokers, bankers and businesses.

"I'm proud and honored to be named president of this organization and I'm excited about the changes we can make in the coming 12 months," said Stevens. "Our goal is to make it even easier for our members to have a voice, be represented, and deliver the quality of services that protect homeowners and new homebuyers."

NAMB was established in 1973 and is the largest mortgage-related individual member-based organization in the U.S. All board members at NAMB are volunteers in one year appointments.

About NAMB – The Association of Mortgage Professionals:

Since 1973, NAMB has been the voice of independent mortgage professionals nationwide. NAMB offers professional education and certification programs for its members and advocates for common sense legislation and regulation aimed at helping consumers and improving business conditions for small businesses, independent mortgage companies and licensed mortgage loan originators. John G. Stevens is the current president of NAMB.
