“We have a dedicated team supporting long-term care residents in the Alameda community,” says Nicole Howell, Executive Director of Ombudsman Services of Contra Costa, Solano and Alameda. “We are so happy to come together with other organizations and community partners to help the hardworking frontline staff care for our seniors.”

This will be the third distribution of gloves, sanitizer, and face masks in the East Bay Area for Ombudsman Services, helping to protect a portion of the 29,000 long-term care residents that it serves.

To reserve supplies, employees of Licensed Residential Care Facilities for the Elderly (RCFEs) and Adult Residential Facilities (ARFs) in Alameda County should visit
