Send2Press® Newswire

The recent Emmy Award recipient is celebrating the release of her first book “Around the Way Girl” (37Ink Books On-Sale-date: Oct. 11, 2016, ISBN: 978-1501125997, Hardcover) and will be in conversation with NYT Best Selling Author and Blogger “Awesomely” Luvvie Ajayi.

The event will take place at The Organization of American States (OAS) building, 200 17th St. NW, Washington DC 20007. Book Purchase is required for entry. Doors open and red carpet arrivals begin at 6 p.m. MYX Fusion will provide a complimentary pour for the first hour, Curlz Inc., will provide swag bags and sounds will be provided by DJ Eric Whitehead. Media and Promotional partners for the event are District of Columbia Public Library, Bens Chili Bowl, and the Believe in Africa Foundation. Photo and videography will be provided by TOG Productions.

In addition to the book talk, a portion of the proceeds will be donated to support the humanitarian efforts with Haitians affected by Hurricane Matthew. Philanthropy is at the foundation of the Oracle Group's mission and according to the founder, critical to its staying power.

"Any Black owned business, especially headed by a woman of color should pat itself on the back if it makes it past the second year, the fact that we are still standing after 10 years is an amazing feeling. To celebrate it with DC's own Taraji P. Henson and the release of her book is the icing on the cake," says Mocha Ochoa Nana, CEO of the Oracle Group. "We have served authors, communities, organizations, children both here and around the globe, yet we have much more work to do and cannot wait to see what the next ten years will bring."
