Offered by American Banker and the Center for Financial Services Innovation (CFSI), EMERGE is an opportunity for banks, credit unions and other financial services providers to explore responsible and competitive strategies for improving both consumer financial health and their bottom lines. The ReverseVision/Open Mortgage exhibit will invite attendees to test their awareness and understanding of the HECM reverse mortgage product.

“Financial institutions that offer mortgage products need to be able to meet borrowers where they are in life. The HECM product is designed specifically for the needs of senior borrowers who are retired or nearing retirement," said Wendy Peel, Vice President of Sales and Marketing for ReverseVision. "Wealth management groups within financial institutions who serve senior homeowners should also consider HECM as part of the overall retirement strategy. Whether as a bridge to delaying social security benefits or simply as line of credit for emergencies, the HECM loan product has a wide range uses in potentially extending a portfolios life and the seniors' quality of life."

"HECMs can be a critical element of the financial mix available to homeowners at age 62 or older. When used strategically, HECM can add lifespan to the resources of retirees' and their households," agreed Sharon Falvey, director of sales operations for Open Mortgage.
