“Seniors have a strong appetite for flexible financial products capable of catering to their varied, aging-related needs, yet the vast majority loan officers will never present aging borrowers with a HECM or proprietary reverse product,” said ReverseVision CEO John Button. “We’ve brought on Sunny to help us bridge the current forward-reverse technology gap that stymies loan officers from offering senior lending products to the very borrower population those products are designed to serve. We are thrilled to bring on a dedicated staff resource to help our clients uplift senior lending products into operational and technological coexistence with forward loans.”

Before joining ReverseVision, Mahdii was director of operations and business development at American Reverse Group, where she directed lending team operations, budgeting and marketing functions. Prior to that, Mahdii was branch manager at Security 1 Lending, where she oversaw the company's two most profitable branch locations, which produced $20 million in monthly volume. Mahdii also launched a reverse mortgage division during her tenure at Omni Home Financing.

"ReverseVision is a leader in digital mortgage technology and am excited to help them equip mortgage lenders with strategies and tools that yield successful business outcomes in today's competitive marketplace," said Mahdii.
