

Sandra Piller Tells All About a 'Good Night Kiss'

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 28, 2014 (SEND2PRESS NEWSWIRE) – Every one of us has been through the emotional roller coaster leading up to a first kiss and all of those sensations are presented in “Good Night Kiss,” the latest country song from Shady Hill Records artist Sandra Piller.

“It was great fun working on this song,” Piller states. “When you have co-writers like Jane Bach and Kelly Fitzgerald, you are always pushed to the top of your game.” As can be seen in the video to the song, the lyrics deal with this romantic topic with a mix of tenderness, observational humor, and playfulness.

“The song represents a beautiful moment but one that is fraught with emotion,” notes Bach, who also produced the recording at Rough Edges Studio in Nashville, “and we didn’t shy away from any of the excitement, hopefulness, and – let’s face it – raw terror you can experience with a first kiss.” Piller adds that “Working in the studio with Jane is something I always enjoy, and I think that comes through when you listen to the song.”

As a veteran music professional in Nashville, Bach penned a number one hit by Reba McEntire (“The Last One to Know”) and has written hit songs for many other country artists including Ray Price and Jo Dee Messina. The third writer on the song, Kelly Fitzgerald, has toured all over the world as a solo and ensemble performer, sharing the stage with such artists as Shelby Lynne, Vonda Shepard, Nanci Griffith, Cheap Trick, Eddie Money, the Gin Blossoms and many others.

Shady Hill Records was founded several years ago to record, distribute, and foster the cause of contemporary artists whose work respects and reflects the strong traditions of the roots of American music.
