Each year, Outside Magazine honors the Top 100 companies in America that raise the standards for work-life balance, company culture and employee benefits. This is the second consecutive year TeamSnap has been recognized by Outside; in 2015, TeamSnap was ranked No. 16 on the prestigious list.

“We’re honored to be recognized for the second year by Outside Magazine,” said TeamSnap Co-Founder and CEO Dave DuPont. “This designation is a testament to the employees at TeamSnap. They are cooperative, supportive and understanding, and as a result, we see low turnover, joyful employees and an exemplary culture of teamwork.”

Outside Magazine chose TeamSnap for this list because of the company’s progressive values, like flexible work hours, a remote workforce, the ability to work anywhere in the world, the offer of unlimited vacation time and the mission of judging employees on goals met rather than hours put in.

“Our team truly demonstrates the ultimate in work-life balance. Some team members take extended vacations around the world, working while exploring. Others simply make time between meetings to go for a bike ride or run. Close to 10 percent of our employees work from RVs while exploring the country,” said TeamSnap Co-Founder, Chief Creative Officer and Minister of Culture Andrew Berkowitz. “Our employees embody the Outside lifestyle, and our policies – or lack thereof – serve to further our hobbies, passions and outdoor pursuits.”

TeamSnap also offers employee perks like a wellness allowance to encourage a healthy lifestyle and an education allowance employees use to fortify career skills. Twice a year TeamSnap brings every employee together from all over the country – and even Croatia – to solve problems, connect in person, build team skills and give ample high fives.
