“We will be doing fifteen concerts in seventeen days and I couldn’t be more excited,” says Jonathan McNary, guitarist.

“Music festivals have always been one of my favorite sorts of shows to play, because i usually run into a new artist I might not have otherwise heard. This will be especially true as we head to Eastern Europe,” Bob Simmons, bassist, agrees.

“I love playing the originals and I’m really looking forward to bringing them to the festivals,” added Victor Toruno, keyboardist.

“People can expect good time full of rocking music and fun energy,” says drummer Jonathan Moore. “We will put on a fun show. It’s full of variety, flavors, and excitement.”

To help promote the Eastern European tour, the band will be releasing a new record entitled, “Golden Goose” in March 2021 under 4818 Records and distribution through Smith Music Group. Although there will be quite a few familiar songs on this record, “we decided to re-cut everything so that the record represents the current line up and sound of the band. People will get to take home what they saw live or come see what they hear, whichever comes first,” says Gary McGrath, guitarist and frontman.

“Gary likes to let musicians play around and experiment. It really makes it a fun process and I think it makes the songs better,” notes Kathryn Hackett, vocalist.
