Thread was launched at Microsoft's campus in Charlotte on September 18th and has received tremendous reviews from both paralegals and lawyers. It has been described as disruptive, refreshing, easy to use and at $39 per user per month offers lawyers a very affordable solution to manage their firms' business and clients.

Thread is a brand-new cloud-based legal case management software, built in collaboration with Microsoft which enables legal practices to free up valuable time, be more productive, increase profitability and truly digitally transform their firms.

“80 percent of legal firms in the U.S. currently do not have a Case Management system in place,” said Liam Mullaney, CEO, eXpd8. “Instead, they are reliant on in-house developed systems that are becoming obsolete due to increasing client demands.”

With Microsoft Azure as its foundation, Thread incorporates several Microsoft technologies including Microsoft Office 365, One Drive for Business and SharePoint. This enables Thread to provide law firms with the ability to manage their entire practice smoothly and efficiently whilst also ensuring government level security, compliance and seamless connectivity. Thread brings together all the essentials of a modern legal practice.

Growing legal firms need a capable, customizable, yet affordable solution to automate and optimize their entire business in order to survive and thrive in today’s competitive market. Thread can help them do just that.

“Thread is truly the missing piece of Microsoft Office 365 for lawyers,” said John Cuddy, Cuddy & Co Solicitors.
