Voices.com is bringing LevelUp to three locations across the United States for Saturdays in March, April, and May: San Francisco, Calif., Dallas, Texas, and New York City, N.Y.

Covering business, technical, and artistic skill tracks for two kinds of audiences – beginner and professional voice actors – LevelUp is an opportunity for talent to get out of the recording booth to explore new opportunities for success, engage with their community, and level up to the next stage of their career.

“Community is vital. We’re in a unique position to bring people together from all facets of the industry to grow and connect,” says Voices.com’s Chief Brand Officer, Stephanie Ciccarelli. “Save the date, because we’re making multiple stops.”

Set in the cultural, commercial, and financial center of Northern California, the March 18, 2017 stop in San Francisco will cover everything from workflow capabilities and how to complete two auditions per minute, to work-life balance best practices as a professional voice artist.

The April 22, 2017 stop in the largest urban hub of Texas, Dallas, will see sessions on how to book character work, how best to set up a home recording studio, method acting as a voiceover artist, and editing tips.

The last stop will take LevelUp to the Big Apple on May 20, 2017 for one of the most comprehensive agendas of the tour. Attendees will make the trek to Brooklyn to learn how to brand one's voice, take a peek behind the curtain of online casting, get the lowdown on audio mixing, have their auditions diagnosed, and get insights on how to sell their voice.

Every stop will also feature a panel of clients who have experience hiring voice talent for their various projects. Their insights on what makes for a good audition, and how best to be selected as a brand voice is a highlight that hasn't been offered to talent before, making this an industry opportunity that is unprecedented.
