The "RNC Participation Trophy for Donald J. Trump, Election 2016" is a heroically scaled bust of Trump, recalling the idealistic portraits of German sculptor Arno Breker. It is fixed atop a six-foot-tall gold-chromed podium, which resembles the Trump Hotel. Trump's sienna-colored likeness has a jutting chin; his sweeping hair is gold-leafed with golden eyebrows to match, and he is crowned with a German eagle as a nod to his German heritage.

Portraying the heroic scaled likeness of Trump himself as a companion piece to the Trump Hotel Las Vegas, with glitz and grandeur to match, dedication of the RNC Participation Trophy is scheduled to take place in its vicinity.

Despite the conceding of his own party and campaign that he is behind in the polls, Trump maintains he is winning.

“A winning attitude facilitates participation in the face of doubt, and Mr. Trump is doing his best, which is the example we want for all of our children. The act of participation makes winners of us all, even when our best isn’t quite enough,” said the artist’s spokesperson Cory Allen. “Mr. Trump deserves the world’s biggest participation award for an unprecedented campaign.”

The Trump award is the inaugural presentation of the RNC Participation Trophy. No word on whether or not future presentations will maintain Mr. Trump’s likeness to represent the participation award in perpetuity.

“RNC Participation Trophy for Donald J. Trump” will be dedicated at 11 a.m. November 4, 2016 in Las Vegas. Press may contact Cory Allen at 323-393-3115 or visit <http://www.cacanet.com> to RSVP for exact location of media conference and dedication ceremony.
